FALL INTO SOLUTIONS.

At Bigfoot Construction Supply, October is about making sure our customers are prepared for what comes next.

From rain gear and cold-weather PPE to heaters, hand warmers, lighting, waterproof footwear, gloves, and everyday jobsite essentials, we've got the products to help keep your crews safe, comfortable, and productive through the fall and into winter.

Because the only thing scarier than a Northwest jobsite in October is realizing you weren't ready for the weather.

GEAR UP FOR FALL

- Rain Gear – Jackets, bibs, pants, and waterproof outerwear to help crews stay dry when the rain settles in.
- Hi-Vis Outerwear – Increased visibility becomes even more important with darker mornings, earlier sunsets, rain, and reduced visibility.
- Cold-Weather & Waterproof Gloves – Keep hands protected while giving crews the dexterity they need to keep working.
- Waterproof Footwear – Because spending an entire shift with wet feet isn't anybody's idea of a good day.
- Cold-Weather Layers – Hoodies, jackets, base layers, and other gear for those increasingly cold mornings.
- Hand Warmers – A small addition that can make a big difference when temperatures start dropping.
- Jobsite Heaters – Keep work areas warmer and more comfortable as we head toward winter.
- Jobsite Lighting – Shorter days mean dependable lighting becomes increasingly important.
- Tarps & Weather Protection – Help protect materials, equipment, and work areas from the elements.

Recently, Bigfoot had the opportunity to team up with Diablo Tools for a Lunch & Learn at Western State Hospital, giving us the chance to connect one of our best vendor partners directly with some of our best customers. It was a fantastic day, with over 300 tradespeople in attendance. And, of course, we brought lunch.

The event allowed the crew to spend some time with Diablo, see products firsthand, ask questions, talk applications, and learn more about the tools and accessories available to help them on the job.

A Bigfoot Lunch & Learn is an opportunity to bring the supply house to the jobsite.

We can work with our vendor partners to give your crew a closer look at products they use every day—or introduce them to new solutions they may not have had a chance to try yet.

It's a chance to:

- See new products and solutions firsthand
- Ask questions directly to product experts
- Get application-specific recommendations
- Put products in the hands of the people actually using them
- Connect your crew with Bigfoot and our vendor partners

Avacu Luna

This month, we're celebrating four years with Avacu Luna, an important part of the warehouse team at our Seattle branch.

Avacu may be one of the younger members of the Bigfoot crew, but what he lacks in years, he more than makes up for with work ethic, attention to detail, and a willingness to work hard.

When an order needs to be pulled, you can count on Avacu to take his time, get it right, and take pride in what he's doing. In our business, that attention to detail matters. Every correctly pulled order means our customers get the material they need, when they need it, without unnecessary headaches or delays.

But hard work is only part of what makes Avacu such a great teammate.

Around the warehouse, he's our friendly giant—and you're just as likely to find him smiling or laughing with the crew as you are to find him busting his butt getting orders ready for customers.

Avacu is the type of employee every team wants: hardworking, dependable, careful, and somebody who's enjoyable to work alongside.

For the last four years, he's played an important role behind the scenes in the service our customers receive every day, and we're lucky to have him representing Bigfoot.

Congratulations on 4 years, Avacu!

Tyler Crabtree

We're also celebrating four years with Tyler Crabtree, another staple of the warehouse team at our Seattle branch.

If there's one word that comes to mind when describing Tyler, it's reliable.

Whether he's pulling an order in the warehouse, helping load material, or jumping in to assist with a delivery, Tyler understands that getting the job done is only half of it—getting it done right the first time is what matters.

That's something both our team and our customers can count on.

Tyler brings an easy-going, steady approach to the job. He's the kind of teammate who doesn't need to make a lot of noise to make an impact. He shows up, handles what needs to be handled, and helps make sure our customers are taken care of.

That consistency is incredibly valuable in construction supply, where schedules change quickly, orders come in fast, and customers are depending on us to keep their jobs moving.

For four years, Tyler has been one of the people helping Bigfoot deliver on that promise day after day.

We appreciate his reliability, his willingness to help wherever he's needed, and the care he puts into servicing our customers.

Congratulations on 4 years, Tyler!
